

Contributing to the FSN Network News

General Overview

The Food Security and Nutrition (FSN) Network is an open community of practice of food security and nutrition implementers, designed to encourage knowledge sharing and collaboration across organizations for improved, high-quality and effective food security interventions.

The FSN Network News, our bi-weekly newsletter, is currently the central means of communication for this community. Subscription also gives you access to our listserv, which we reserve, for urgent or time sensitive messages. We intend for the listserv to be field-and implementation-focused and to relay quality, actionable announcements and welcome contributions on topics such as the following:

- * Small grants programs and other funding opportunities
- * Meetings, trainings and other relevant events
- * Policy changes or release of guidelines that affect food security and nutrition implementation
- * New tools, reports, and training materials relevant to the community
- * Documents released for stakeholder review
- * Results of operations research and other studies
- * News articles relevant to food security and nutrition implementation
- * Job announcements and consultant SOWs relevant to the food security community

To contribute to the newsletter or the listserv please send an email to fsn.network.news@gmail.com. All contributions will be monitored. The Food Security and Nutrition Network list is open to anyone working in the food security community; i.e. contracting agencies, field staff, USAID, etc. One must subscribe to be able receive or contribute to the newsletter and messages via the listserv.
