

The Food Security and Nutrition (FSN) Network is an open community of practice of food security and nutrition implementers seeking to create opportunities for the food security and nutrition community to share information, shape agendas, understand and influence donor priorities, build consensus on promising practices, and widely diffuse technical knowledge.

There are many ways to get involved:

Knowledge sharing events in both the United States and overseas provide peer learning opportunities as community members bring their technical experience and individual perspectives to bear on issues relevant to food security and nutrition implementation. Events held to-date have addressed issues such as conservation agriculture, preventing malnutrition in under 2s, performance monitoring, agriculture nutrition linkages, gender integration, barrier analysis, consortium management and others. If you have suggestions about topic areas, or are interested in presenting at or attending future events, contact us at commentsfsn@gmail.com

Global task forces enable members from around the world to directly contribute their expertise in continuing discussions on development and adaptation of crucial information, tools, and methodologies that are responsive to stakeholder needs. To learn more about one of our global task forces, please contact:

- Agriculture – William Fiebig, wfiebig@dc.mercycorps.org
- Nutrition and Food Technology – Joan Jennings, jjennings@savechildren.org
- Social and Behavioral Change – Tom Davis, tdavis@fh.org
- Monitoring and Evaluation – Arif Rashid, arif@tangointernational.com
- Gender Integration – Melissa Teuber, mteuber@savechildren.org
- Knowledge Management – Joan Whelan, jwhelan@coregroupdc.org

If you have suggestions for other task forces or technical areas where cross-organizational collaboration could bring real rewards, let us know at commentsfsn@gmail.com

Regional interest groups allow field-based practitioners to join together using remote technology to share experiences, seek recommendations, and strengthen capacity in cross-cutting and emerging implementation areas. We are currently supporting interest groups in the Southern and West Africa regions, and hope to add more regions and interest groups soon. To learn more, contact us at commentsfsn@gmail.com

A web portal is under development to feature work spaces for technical task forces, discussion forums by technical interest area and a comprehensive resource library of community information, tools, and methodologies. Once launched, we will welcome your submission of tools, guides and other resources, news of events, trainings and project updates, and your participation in online discussions.

Our email newsletter reaches over 800 food aid and food security implementers with announcements of new funding opportunities, events, information requests, new resources and other community information. We welcome news and updates from the community so please let us know at commentsfsn@gmail.com. Subscribe at: bit.ly/fsnnetworknews
